U of T Police arrest six after scuffle

Professor Jill Conway, Vice-President, Internal Affairs, released the following statement yesterday:

Six persons were arrested on Thursday, February 1st, after a scuffle between demonstrators, who had been blocking access to 215 Huron Street, and campus police who were attempting to keep clear the entrance to the building which houses the major business offices of the University of Toronto.

The demonstrators were supporters of the "Stop the Students Surcharge Committee" - a small group which has been militantly campaigning since early January for action in the fees strike beyond that advocated by the official student organization - and pickets from a dissident group in the Service Employees' Union.

The background of the events leading up to Thursday's incident is as follows:

On January 19th, 1973, notice was posted advising eleven employees of the Grounds Staff on the St. George Campus of a temporary lay-off, effective January 29th. The reason for the temporary lay-off was lack of work for employees on the Grounds crew due to the abnormally long snow-free period in January.

On January 22nd the Service Employees' Union Local 204 filed eleven individual grievances challenging the University's right to lay off the employees under the terms of the collective agreement and, in addition, submitted a group grievance concerning the manner in which the lay-off notice had been posted. The University replied to the eleven grievances, stating that there had been no violations of the collective agreement, but agreed that written notices should have been given to each employee individually. Such notices were sent the same day confirming that the lay-off was temporary and would not exceed two weeks. The University's Labour Relations Manager met with Union representatives on January 24th and 25th in attempts to settle the grievances.

A meeting was held on January 29th with union representatives and the grievances were resolved. All those affected by the lay-off notices are currently employed. During the week-end while the grievances were being considered, a snowfall provided sufficient additional work to justify cancellation of the temporary layoffs. However, a number of employees have been picketing outside 215 Huron Street each day from January 29th to January 31st, demanding unconditionally that the University guarantee that there will be no future lay-offs regardless of whether work is available or not. This small group of dissident members of the Service Employees' Union has joined with students and other demonstrators from the "Stop the Student Surcharge Committee".

With the combination of the two groups of protestors, the "Stop the Student Surcharge Committee" and the dissident union members the picketing assumed a more militant aspect. Minor scuffles including physical harassment of employees seeking access to the building occurred on January 29th and 30th. On January 31st bodily harm was inflicted on one member of the University staff. Following this incident a special meeting of the Internal Affairs Committee of the Governing Council was called to review the situation. After this review the decision was reached to maintain free access to the building in a manner which did not interfere with lawful picketing.

At 12:10 p.m. on February 1st five or six supporters of the "Stop the Students Surcharge Committee" resumed picketing. They were joined at 12:12 p.m. by pickets from the dissident group in the Service Employees' Union. Shortly thereafter, members of the campus police requested the picketers to allow free access to the building. At this point the group ceased picketing and demonstrators linked arms and closed off access to the building. The five or six campus police standing outside the doors then issued the proper warning that access to the building must be allowed and asked the demonstrators to move aside. After the demonstrators refused this request the campus police then moved to clear the path to the door. At this point there was a scuffle which resulted in charges being laid against six of the demonstrators and all six demonstrators were arrested. After the arrests were made, Metro Police from Division 52 were called at approximately 12:30 p.m. to take those arrested into custody. Charges of assault are being preferred by Metro Police on the complaint of six campus police officers and two campus police women.

Hockey Blues return after wins in Poland

The University of Toronto Blues are back home playing hockey on their own ice, after a two week year-end visit to Katowice, Poland. The Blues visited this mining and industrial town of 300,000 people between Dec. 28 and Jan. 10.

They played four games while visiting Poland. The first, against GKS Katowice (Gorniczy Klub Sportowy), was tied 2-2. In the second game against Naprzod Janowce, the Blues won by 7-6. The Blues played GKS Katowice a second time and won 4-2, and took the fourth game, against Baildon, by 9-2.

The Blues not only played hockey while in Poland but shared many educational experiences as well. They spent a short time in Warsaw sight-seeing and visited a coal mine in Katowice, spending four hours underground. They also visited Auschwitz and the ancient capital of Poland, Krakow.

Blues coach Tom Watt has been invited back to Poland to work with the Polish teams in the fall.

Union withdrew from 'further demonstrations' before Huron St incident

The following statement has been issued by Don Barclay, business agent of the Service Employees' Union No. 204:

"The Service Employees' Union No. 204, through the business agent, Don Barclay, announced this morning that the Union has withdrawn from any further demonstrations concerning the lay-off of eleven Grounds workers. The reasons are simple: the lay-off notices were withdrawn and the men are at work. That is what we set out to do and that is important."

Changes in admission of non-matriculants important to faculty

The Bulletin has received the following from Prof. J. B. Conacher, Chairman of the Department of History:

The shelving of the debate on the library question by the General Committee of the Arts and Science Council highlighted in the Bulletin of 12 January was undoubtedly dramatic but not very important since the Faculty Council has no jurisdiction in the matter.

Your reporter gave much less attention to a more significant decision of the meeting, namely the passage of two motions, one replacing the term "mature student" by "non-matriculant" and the other reducing the age at which a student might be admitted from 23 to 21. Thus, in future, there is to be practically no age differentiation between those admitted with, and those admitted without, matriculation. The non-matriculant only has to do well in one pre-University course offered by the Division of Extension to be allowed in by the Admissions Office. Student spokesmen welcomed the change on the grounds that it was a move towards an open University and that the existing high school program was largely a waste of time. Administrators, with some embarrassment perhaps, offered quite different arguments, citing statistics to show that relatively few students entered the University in this way and that the Admissions Office was rigorous in screening them. The lowering of the age, however, could greatly increase the number of applications from non-matriculants and, as one faculty member observed, it should not be left to the officials in the Admissions Office to make decisions about entrance without clearer rules to guide them than at present exist.

All members of faculty should know of this decision, made so quietly and casually, and ponder its consequences.
